THE SPARK INSTITUTE ANSWERS MORE TECHNICAL QUESTIONS REGARDING 403(b) PLANS INFORMATION SHARING

SIMSBURY, CT, Feb. 3 – The SPARK Institute today announced that it has posted new answers to additional technical questions it has received regarding its 403(b) Plans Information Sharing Data Elements Best Practices. “These new questions and answers supplement those that were posted on December 18, 2008,” said Larry H. Goldbrum, General Counsel of The SPARK Institute. The new questions and answers, along with previously answered questions and other materials related to the Best Practices, are on the Institute’s web site at <http://www.sparkinstitute.org/comments-and-materials.php>. “Anyone interested in information related to the Best Practices should check the web site regularly for answers to the latest questions and other updates,” Goldbrum said.

The SPARK Institute is the leading voice in Washington for the retirement services industry. Through the combined expertise of its member companies, The SPARK Institute provides research, education, testimony and comments on pending legislative and regulatory issues to members of Congress and relevant government agency officials. Collectively, its members serve over 95% of the nation’s 401(k) participants and more than 90% of all 403(b) plan participants.
